Destructive Fire in Trigg.

The large four-story building, known as the "Wash Rickett's mansion," situated near Montgomery, Trigg county, was reduced to ashes at an early hour Tuesday morning. The property is owned by Mrs. Lula Shelby, who now lives in Princeton. Messrs. Jno. S. Gaines and Thos. Wilson were occupying a portion of the house at the time of the fire and their personal effects were also burned. The total loss will foot up about $3,000. There was a small insurance on the building, but nothing on the contents. The fire originated from a defective kitchen flue. The "Rickett's House" was one of the finest structures in that section of Trigg county.

Work on the Waterworks.

The waterworks plant is making good headway and getting things well under way. The engine house in now being covered and will be done this week. The dam has been completed some time. The stone foundation for the standpipe is nearing completion. The standpipe at the base will be 23 feet in diameter. It is located on the high hill in the grove adjacent to Gainesville colored church. Down in town the work of laying the pipes is nearly over. The workmen are now on Main street and have gone from Sixth street to Tenth street already, using the eastern side of the street. Pipes have been dropped several squares further on and the large pipes will all be under ground in a short while.

BOB AND ALF.

The Taylor Brothers at the Tabernacle Last Night.

"Bob" Taylor and his brother "Alf" appeared together at the Tabernacle last night and were greeted by a very large audience. The brothers are meeting at present on the same platform for the first time since they made their memorable race for the governorship of Tennessee, but this time the "war of the roses" is a peaceful war, from which one brother gets as much glory and as much profit as the other. Their dual production is entitled "Yankee Doodle and Dixie." Alf takes the Yankee and Bob the Dixie part of the performance.

"Every one, of course, remembers the race of the Taylor brothers against each other for the gubernatorial chair. It was in 1886 that the Tennessee Republicans nominated Alf Taylor as their candidate for governor and the Democrats saw them and went them one better as it proved, with Alf's brother Bob.

"The entertainment given by the Taylors is unique and as enjoyable as it is odd. It isn't a lecture, it isn't a series of character sketches, it isn't a rendition of folk-lore stories and songs in Southern dialect, it isn't a mere play of oratory and eloquence; yet it combines all these charmingly. There is music, mirth, pathos, poetry, folklore and fun blended into a well-rounded whole that interests while it elevates.

"Alf Taylor assumes the first part of the program. His theme is 'Yankee Doodle,' and from it he evolves a noble drama of liberty. He rapidly sketches the history of the American republic. The subjugation of the wilderness, the struggle with the throes of the evolution of government are treated with liberal and graceful touch. Washington is the hero of the patriotic and largely allegorical play. He is enthroned as the archangel of liberty. The speaker tells with rare skill of the greatness of this nation. 'Yankee Doodle,' from being a young national giant just awakened to a realization of his power, becomes the typical unit of strength—the Yankee as we see and know him. With this change comes a leap from the sublime to the ridiculous, and the audience is convulsed at the conceit of a bloomer army returning victorious from the wars to lift for a moment the mind of the going man above pots and pans and the baby. Alf Taylor is a finished orator and his eloquent tributes to the great men of the republic who have risen from the ranks of labor to the most commanding eminence win warm applause. The liberty of speech, thought and labor, he maintains, were the spirit of 'Yankee Doodle,' and that spirit has created the grandest structure on earth in the government under which we live.

"Ex-Gov. 'Bob' Taylor is the defender and eulogist of Dixie. He says Mason and Dixon's line may not exist in law, but it does in fact and in sentiment, and ever will. 'It is the dividing line between cold bread and hot biscuit.' It is there in sentiment, and will remain as long as Yankee Doodle says 'You hadn't ought to do it,' and Dixie responds 'I done do it.' The war accentuated this line by placing Yankee Doodle on the pension roll and Dixie on crutches. He would despise the Northern man who would not think his rocky hills the best the sun ever shone upon; he would have no respect for the Westerner who did not think his plains the prettiest and his mines the richest of the world; but he would always love Dixie the best because it was his home, and because God made it the best. The crown of his talk is his picture of Southern life. At one point the speaker sketches the last of his family's slaves, an old negro man who had outlived his master and grown to love his master's children as his own. In a last interview he told his young master that the fiery chariot and its accompanying band of angels had twice been to his bedside and, as he longed to be with his friends of the good old days it would not be many days before it would come and take him. The young man saw the faithful darkey next in death, and as he said it he broke into that incomparable melody, 'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.' The entertainment is full of south touches."

Tax Receipts Heavy.

City-Tax collector Cravens has been rushed with business all this week by taxpayers anxious to avoid the penalty added to day. The receipts Wednesday were $3,200 and yesterday they were expected to be still heavier at the close of business hours.

Coleman Phelps will Hang.

Gov. Brown has fixed Thursday, Nov. 8, as the day on which Coleman Phelps, convicted of murder at Bowling Green, will be hanged. The case has been taken through all the courts, the verdict in the lower court being sustained each time.

At Negaunee, Mich., ten inches of snow fell Tuesday. Sleighs were in use for the first time this season in that country.

THE EARTH QUAKED.

A VIOLENT SEISMIC DISTURBANCE YESTERDAY MORNING.

Two Distinct Shocks at 5:15 O'clock—Buildings Shaken and People Aroused From Their Slumbers.

Two distinct and violent shocks of earthquake were felt here and all over this section at 5:15 o'clock yesterday morning.

It was the most violent disturbance of the kind felt here within the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

The first shock was felt with such force that buildings swayed, windows rattled and people were aroused from sound slumber. It was accompanied by a low rumbling sound. The second shock followed immediately and was more violent than the first.

Many persons were badly frightened and rushed from their rooms. The shock soon passed away though, and was not followed by any further shake-up. The whole disturbance occupied not more than a minute.

At Bethel Female College the young ladies in the upper stories were badly frightened and rushed wildly about the halls.

At South Kentucky college the shock was felt with great force.

All over the city people were awakened, but so far as heard from the only incident worthy of mention was that some plastering was shaken off the ceiling in Judge A. H. Anderson's bed room.

Dave Wiley says it shook him out of bed, but "scared" should probably be substituted for "shook." Only two or three people have been found in the city who slept through it all.

At Caskey Dr. P. S. Anderson's chimney was cracked from bottom to top.

The shock was felt at Cadiz, Pembroke and other neighboring towns, about the same as here.

At Evansville it was even more distinct, but no harm was done.

Outside points had not been heard from when our forms were locked.

The Latest From Calloway.

MURRAY, Ky., Oct. 31.—In the judge's race, matters look more hopeful than yet reported. John Hendrick and Ollie James have done some effective work here for Linn. Hendrick is still stumping the county in the interest of Linn and the ticket entire. He is doing great good and Linn's majority will be greatly increased. Harmony prevails and his majority may now be put at anywhere between 700 and 1100 in Calloway.

Boyd and Price Held Over.

The examining trial of Sam Boyd and Joe Price, the negroes charged with the murder of Lewis Watkins, was held before Judge Breathitt Wednesday, and resulted in both defendants being held over to answer any indictment that might be found against them when the next grand jury meets. Their bonds were fixed at $250. They were unable to furnish them and were taken back to jail, where they will remain until next March.

To Vote in December.

The Wet side anticipated the Dry in calling the election on prohibition for the city only. A petition has been filed for the four city precincts, signed by 25 per cent. of the voters, calling for an election Dec. 27.

The election will be held separate from the proposed county vote, and it is said the county vote will now be abandoned, as there are only six saloons outside of Hopkinsville.

Good Work Among Convicts.

Over 100 convicts are now members of the Christian Endeavor society, which was organized at the Eddyville penitentiary a few weeks ago. A Paducah delegation visited the prison last Sunday and held services inside the walls.

No Sales This Week.

Several members of the Tobacco Board are absent this week and it was decided to have no sales until next week. Receipts are light, as no new tobacco has yet been delivered. There is very little being done in the loose market.

The grading on the railroad from Empire to the new coal mine near that place has been finished and the work of track laying will be done next week. The shaft work at the mine is also being rapidly pushed and coal from this mine will likely be put on the market in a few weeks.

The fall term of Circuit Court ends tomorrow. This week has been consumed in the disposition of civil matters. Much business has been transacted during this term and the docket is well up.

THE SUPPLEMENTAL REGISTRATION.
